Conference Hotel & Registration Information

Join other federal, state and local officials for the 2005 National Association of Flood and Stormwater Management Agencies Annual Meeting in Anchorage, Alaska, on August 21-25, 2005. NAFSMA will meet at The Hotel Captain Cook (www.captaincook.com), located at Fourth at K Street in downtown Anchorage. Truly one of the nation's premier hotels, The Hotel Captain Cook, provides an ideal setting for this year's conference.

Holistic Watershed Management is the focus of the 2005 sessions, which will be especially helpful to those agencies faced with growing interdisciplinary water resource management needs. In addition to providing valuable peer information exchange among flood and stormwater management officials from throughout the country, federal officials from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, the Federal Emergency Management Agency/DHS and the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service will participate in the meeting.

A special workshop designed to help local agencies understand the nature and potential legal impacts of funding a stormwater management program will be part of this year's Annual Meeting. Special events are currently being finalized that will be enjoyed by attendees and guests alike who attend this year's conference. Program details will soon be available on the NAFSMA website at www.nafsma.org or from Conference Registrar Lori Buford at 916-574-0609.

Attendees are urged to make hotel reservations early at The Hotel Captain Cook at 800-843-1950 or 907-276-6000. Please mention that you are a NAFSMA guest for the special meeting rate of $170 for a single and $180 for a double room, plus taxes. This rate is available to attendees for three days prior and following the conference. July 21, 2005, is the hotel cutoff for reservations at the special rate.
